

Daily Article (Bharath's Reading list) - Answers and Explanations 14.11.2023

Article link : Link (Dishwashing advice: A new wave of cookbooks is showing the messy parts.)

1. Which of the following is not an observation made by the author in the article?

- A. The nature of a cookbook's instruction also seems to have shifted with technological development
- B. If cookbooks can remind us to use up our scraps and avoid spoilage, they can and ought to also nudge us toward reconsidering the value of water as a precious cleaning resource
- C. To carefully consider the practice of dish-doing is to give the cook and her labor respect and legitimacy
- D. Most people are just as interested in books on how the best techniques to wash our dishes as they are in reading recipes

Explanation : D

Note the line, 'Most of us don't need a book to teach us how to wash our dishes; we likely already have our own imperfect systems, or we have a powerful appliance, or we have a partner who does the cleaning.'

2. The author believes cookbooks must include advice on how to clean as:

- A. The endpoint of cooking is not eating; it is cleaning
- B. If someone is intimidated by the act of cooking, they might also be intimidated by the mess that cooking creates and so a cookbook that addresses the former must also address the latter
- C. Cookbooks that advice on how to minimize food waste must also address conservation of water, which is at the heart of many dish-washing techniques
- D. All the above

Explanation: D

All given points are mentioned in the article.

3. The author describes herself as:

- A. Someone who is a rigorous cook, who loves cooking for friends
- B. A rigorous cleaner, who always does dishes in silence
- C. Someone who loves to imbibe cleaning tips and makes a daily effort to wash dishes
- D. A subsistence dishwasher, who thinks dish washing is an opportunity to feel industrious

Explanation: D

Refer to the last few paragraphs